THE CHARLEROI MAIL

VOLUME XXI—No. 283. CHARLEROI, WASHINGTON COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1921. CENTS.

COUNTY IS DIVIDED INTO TWO LEGISLATIVE DISTRICTS

North and West Section Comprise One, South and East Another

WILL ELECT 4 ASSEMBLYMEN

Under the legislative reappointment bill passed at the recent session of the Pennsylvania Assembly, Washington county will elect four members to the house of representatives in the future, instead of three, as in the past. The four members will be chosen at the general election in November, 1922.

The bill also provides that the county be divided into two districts, the first and second, each of which shall elect two members. The Chartiers Valley branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, and the Washington and Waynesburg railroad mark the approximate dividing line of the two districts. All of the territory lying north and west of these two railroads comprise the first district, and all lying south and east of the roads make up the second district. This line is fairly accurate except for South Strabane, which is included in the first district.

The first district comprises the boroughs of Burgettstown, Canonsburg, Claysville, East Washington, Houston, McDonald, Midway, Washington, and the townships of Blaine, Buffalo, Canton, Cecil, Chartiers, Cross Creek, Donegal, East Finley, Hanover, Hopewell, Independence, Jefferson, Morris, Mt. Pleasant, North Franklin, Robinson, Smith, South Franklin, South Strabane and West Finley, or a total of ten boroughs and twenty townships.

The second district is composed of the boroughs of Beallsville, Bentleyville, California, Centerville, Charleroi, Coal Center, Cokeburg, Deemston, Donora, Dunlev, Elco, Ellsworth, Finleyville, Long Branch, Marianna, Monongahela, New Eagle, North Charleroi, Roscoe, Speers, Stockdale, Twilight and West Brownsville, and the townships of Allen, Amwell, Carroll, East Bethlehem, East Pike Run, Fallowfield, North Strabane, Nottingham, Peters, Somerset, Union, West Bethlehem, and West Pike Run, or a total of 22 boroughs, one city and 13 townships.

The population of the county by the census of 1920 is 188,992. The first district will have a population of 91,128, and the second of 97,854.

We have cleaned carpets and rugs for some of the largest hotels, business offices and best private families in the city, who are pleased and will testify as to the merits of our perfectly sanitary and mechanical mode of cleaning carpets in your home or at our own plant. AMERICANIZATION WAS TOPIC OF STUDY

The missionary society of the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church met Thursday afternoon in the Sunday school room of the church and the discussion was informal throughout, for the topic was one in which every one was interested, it being "Americanization Work."

Mrs. Emma Dawson was the leader and spoke on "How to Make the Foreign-born feel at Home in America" She demonstrated her talk by using two Russian children, and told of their struggle since coming here to live. "Pittsburg Presbytery is a great missionary organization," said Mrs. Dawson.

"The Church as a center for Americanization" was the topic discussed by Mrs. Davis Woodward. "What Our Church can Do" was the subject of Mrs. Thomas Kendrick and "Our Dependence on the Immigrant" that of Mrs. Allen.

The Society went on record as favoring "Americanizing the foreign-born, but want it "Christian Americanization."

A special number was given in the form of a duet by Rev. Burson and Miss Emma Clutter, accompanied by Miss Bethel Bowman. During the social hour many visitors were introduced to the company and new members were made welcome. The hostesses were the Misses Clifford, Mont and Lynn Robertson, Mrs. Wickerham and Mrs. Loren Tope.

ELOPING PAIR WERE FOUND IN NEW YORK

Eugene Trutzzo, an Italian resident of Monessen, who eloped with Mrs. Rosie Fusco, wife of Pasquale Fusco, also of Monessen, was arrested in New York a few days ago on a warrant issued by a Monessen official. When the pair left Monessen they took with them two of the Fusco children, Frank aged five, and John, aged nine.

When Mr. Fusco learned that the eloping pair had been arrested, he left for the east, accompanied by an officer. The eloping pair were arrested at the home of a relative of Trutzzo, and taken before a magistrate, who committed them to the care of the Pennsylvania officer. However, the district attorney's office stepped in and said it would be necessary to secure extradition papers, although the eloping pair were ready to return. The officer and Mr. Fusco returned to Monessen, bringing with them the two Fusco children, and steps are now being taken to secure the necessary papers from Harrisburg, to bring the guilty pair from New York.

CHARLEROI A CONTENDER FOR FIRST HONORS IN COUNTY MEET

Competition will Be Spirited in Effort to Check Washington

GIRLS' MEET TO BE INTERESTING

Tomorrow morning twenty four of the leading athletes of the Charleroi High school, accompanied by the members of the girls athletic team, will go to Washington, where they will compete in the various events in the largest field and track meet ever held by the Washington County Interscholastic Athletic League.

College Field, where the events will be held, has been specially prepared for the occasion, and indications point to one of the largest assemblies ever seen on that historic field to witness the various contests. Visitors will be present from every section of the county, because all of the leading high schools in the county will have representatives in the meet, which is expected to be one of the most bitterly contested ever staged by the association.

From the way the contest sizes up at this time it looks like a contest between Washington and Charleroi for first honors in Section 1, for while Donora and Monongahela will send good teams, yet the numbers are small, and it is not likely they will be represented in all of the events. On the other hand Charleroi will have 24 young men, while Washington is pinning its hopes to 36 representatives, all of whom are rated as good contenders. If Washington wins this year it will become the perpetual owner of the second trophy offered by the Observer Publishing company. If Charleroi can stop the Catfish athletics the locals will have an incentative to send another strong team to the contest next year in the hope of repeating. This fact will add a great deal of additional interest to the occasion, which promises to draw hundreds of people to the field of action. Favorable weather is all that the athletes are asking for and they will furnish the thrills.

The girls' contest, which is scheduled to begin at 9:30 o'clock will also have its interesting side. This is the first time the girls have been given an opportunity to show their athletic abilities, and there are going to be some surprises when the contests take place. Charleroi hopes to win a favorable place in the contest, and from the form displayed by some of the young ladies at the inter-class meet last week, it will take some good hustlers to beat them. The Charleroi party will leave here in plenty of time tomorrow morning so that the young ladies will be able to appear on the grounds at the appointed time.

Notice.

There will be an opportunity to see inhabitants of Mars at the Charleroi Turner Hall Sunday, May 8th at 3 P. M. Capacity limited. Tickets should be secured early at the Hall, Seventh and McKean. 273t2-*

HEAVY SENTENCES ON RECKLESS MOTORISTS

Leslie Bowden and Albert Ingen convicted at the last session of the Fayette county courts of recklessly operating a motor vehicle, and running down a girl in front of her home at Brier Hill, were sentenced on Tuesday by Judge J. Q. VanSwearingen to pay the costs in the case, a fine of $250 each, $75 to the injured girl and to undergo imprisonment in the Allegheny county workhouse for one year, sentence to be remitted on payment of the fine, costs and compensation.

PRETTY FUNCTION FOR RETIRING TEACHER

A very prettily appointed function occurred at Fifth Street school, on Wednesday last, when the teachers of that building gave a two-course dinner in honor of Miss Ruby Charles, a fellow teacher, whose marriage will take place in the early fall. The table was most tastefully decorated with dog wood blossoms and plates were laid for sixteen. The following were present: Misses Elizabeth Elliott, Ruby Charles, Queen Wilson, Margaret Chaney, Emma Clutter, Mildred Gamble, Muriel Baker, Sadie Hersche, Price G. Frye, and Ruth Hetherington, and Mesdames Helen Robertson, Ruth Neeson, Ruth Reeves, Genevieve Letchworth, Annie South and Emma Robertson. The occasion proved to be a most delightful one. After doing full justice to the good things provided, the honor guest was called forward and presented with a beautiful electric grill, indicative of the love and good wishes for future happiness of the teachers with whom Miss Charles has for several years been associated. Miss Charles was deeply appreciative of the kindness shown her. Another distinctive feature of the gathering was the presentation to Miss Elizabeth Elliott, principal of the school, of a handsome mother of pearl manicure set, as a token of the respect and esteem in which she is held by the teachers of Fifth Street building. Miss Elliott was taken completely by surprise by the kind action of her fellow workers.

Your carpets will be clean and perfectly sanitary. You will again see all those beautiful colors you admired so much when they were new. No gasous or greasy oils applied. Nothing but a pure Vegetable Compound used. Electric Carpet Cleaning Co., Raymond L. Yenny, manager, 719 Fallowfield avenue. Local Phone 285. 282-t2-*

LOST OUT BY SMALL MARGIN

Daring Adventurer Played for Millions and Almost Succeeded in Dishonest Venture.

A remarkable rogue, at a time when the competition for that distinction is keen, was arrested recently. By name Surran, before the war he kept a small shop, eking out his legitimate profits by receiving stolen goods. This stage of his life ended in a blaze and he was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for burning down his place of business to get the insurance money.

Since the war he has become the most expert of all the bandits who prey on the immense dumps left behind by the American and British, and by perseverance he got together a large sum. Last August he tried a higher flight. Well dressed and suave, he presented himself at a certain dump in France and bought the whole place, the sum demanded being £1,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. To arrive at this end without actually paying a penny to the government he had to distribute £10,000 in bribes and tips.

He immediately started to cart off his "purchase," but lack of capital was his downfall. He had hardly a cent left over from his gigantic campaign of bluff and bribery, and could not pay the wagon drivers, who complained to the police.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Poet Laureateship of England.

The poet laureateship of England has been an office of high honor since the days of Geoffrey Chaucer, but it was not until the reign of James I that a royal patent was granted by which the poet laureate became an officer of the crown at a salary of about $700 a year, with a tierce of canary from the royal cellars as perquisite. Ben Jonson was the first poet laureate under James' patent (1619-1637), but many "Versificators," "Versifers" and "Laureates" had preceded him, among them being John Gower, the author of "Confessio Amantis," and Edmund Spenser, who was, however, styled "Court Poet." In 79 years, from 1813 to 1892, the post was filled by Southey, Wordsworth and the late Lord Tennyson.

Turks Without Fear of Death.

One of the reasons the Turks used to be such good soldiers was because contempt for life is the essence of the faith for which they fought. "Divinely calm" are words that have been employed to describe the profound and complete resignation to the will of Allah which is an integral part of the Mohammedan faith. The pious Mohammedan has ever present in his mind the end of earth and the beginning of life beyond. The Turk is said to consider himself as an individual camped in the world, as his nation has so long been camped in Europe. And he considers the joys of life only shadows in comparison with the everlasting delights which await him in paradise.

TIRED OF TEACHING.

Few teachers who went into the government service during the war have any inclination to return to their old profession. Inquiries recently made by School Life of former eachers in the employ of the War Risk insurance bureau show that of the 272 who replied only 9 per cent expressed an intention of taking up teaching again, while 40 per cent said they wished to escape the school room and 51 per cent declared that they would never return to the old work. All of the 272 are normal school graduates, yet they are now doing routine clerical work which "does not require more than an elementary education," only a few having positions involving same administrative duties. But they are paid from $400 to $760 a year more than they were receiving as teachers

Of course the better pay is the chief explanation of their attitude, but this is not all They complain of the "nerve strain" of teaching, of time-consuming conferences and meetings after school hours, of "politics," "favoritism" and lack of consideration The most surprising complaint is that teachers are not appreciated by the public and are even "despised" Apparently there was no discussion of the advantages of the teaching profession, which include the long summer vacations (three months in many cases), giving time for further training, or outside pursuits, or mere rest and pleasuring. This interesting report adds to the many indications that if the public wants the rising generation to be in the care of competent teachers, the profession must be made better paying and more attractive in other ways.

PAROLE IS GIVEN MISS ELLA GOLLICK

In an order of the Washington county court handed down on Wednesday, a temporary parole has been granted to Miss Ella Gollick, now in the Industrial Home for Women at Muncy Mrs. Mae B. Ecker, assistant probation officer of the Juvenile court, will go to Muncy today to bring Miss Gollick back to Charleroi. Miss Gollick was sent to this institution upon her plea of guilty to the charge of felonious assault and battery, having shot and seriously wounded Ambrose Dooley, whom she alleged betrayed her.

GERMANY LOST TOY MARKET

United States and Japan Now Supply Canada With Playthings She Does Not Produce.

The United States is now first in supplying those toys needed to supplement the output of Canadian factories. The additional quantity required by Canada to supply its own domestic trade amounted in the last year to $1,500,000 worth. Before the war Germany was the chief source of supply, but the United States now leads and Japan has likewise made a notable advance in its toy shipments to that market. In 1913 American exports of toys to Canada amounted to $273,138 and in the year ended March 31, 1920, the total was $1,130,372. Japan's trade grew from $78,728 to $277,946 in the same period, while there was only a small increase in toys sent from the United Kingdom.

The toy and doll industry of Canada, according to Vice Consul Horace M. Sanford at Ottawa, has made considerable advance compared with pre-war time, but imports were needed to meet the domestic demand. At the present time some thirty-five Canadian toy factories are listed, although the census returns of 1918 reported only fifteen. The kinds of toys made there include animals, autos, balls, billiard games, boats, building blocks, carriages, croquinole boards, croquet sets, dishes, dolls' furniture, games, garden sets, lawn swings, pool tables, tricycles and wheelbarrows, which are made of celluloid, enamel, iron, steel, tin, rubber and wood.

Last year Canada exported $139,052 worth of dolls and toys, the United States taking $5,633 worth and the United Kingdom $120,322.

ONE FLAW IN BRIGHT IDEA

Janitor Called On as "Dinner Substitute" Might Object to Personal Inconvenience Involved.

A young Indianapolis physician had been invited by a school teacher to accompany her to a dinner party at which he was an absolute stranger. He accepted the invitation, but at the last minute had to break it. "But you can take some other man and pass him off for me," he offered, generously. "No one there knows me, so it'll go all right."

The teacher hesitated. "But they know most of the men I know," she said. And then a sudden smile came over her face. "I might take our school janitor. He's new in the city, but you could give him some of your clothes and it would probably pass."

"But how does he talk?" asked the doctor, a little bit doubtful of the scheme now.

"Oh, his talking is all right," assured the teacher, and smiled wider [illegible] "There's only one [illegible] about. He chews [illegible] wondered if he would [illegible] that long."—Indianapolis [illegible]

Miss T., a Terre Haute principal, is a genius at finding things. Her boys all know it now, too. The other day a youngster was leaning over trying to fix a pen when he suddenly straightened up and announced that a piece of the pen flew into his eye. She accordingly excused him from work and gave him all the attention accorded an invalid. And he enjoyed it, too.

But that afternoon his enjoyment was so evident that she grew suspicious. She called him to her and passed a magnet close to his eye. Of course no piece of steel came out to meet it, but there did come a confession from the youngster that he was playing soldier at the time, and that no piece of steel had gone into his eye.—Indianapolis News.

"Peter, Where's Thy Wife?"

Man is always imagining that he hears bits of human speech in the calls of Birds. The Boer on the South African veldt, though he seems unimaginative enough to a stranger, has his own pretty fancies of that sort. One of these is referred to by a correspondent of the New York Times: After a protracted winter the first birds to appear are said by Boers to write to the press to say that they have heard the call of the red-throated corncrake. The Boers call him Piet, mijn vrouw (Piet, my wife), because his call sounds like those words. The story is that a Dutchman named Piet shot a female crake on the veld and that ever since the male bird has followed him, crying, "Piet, mijn vrouw?" The story gains point from the fact that there is something melancholy in the bird's cry and that no answering call by the male is ever heard.

Early Glazed Windows.

It is said that in the reign of Henry III of England a few ecclesiastical buildings had glazed windows. Suger, however, a century before, had adorned his great work, the abbey of St. Denis, with windows, not only glazed, but painted; and I presume that other churches of the same class, both in France and England, especially after the lancet-shaped window had yielded to one of ampler dimensions, were generally decorated in a similar manner. Yet glass is said not to have been employed in the domestic architecture of France before the Fourteenth century; and its introduction into England was probably by no means earlier. Nor indeed did it come into general use during the period of the Middle ages.—Christian Science Monitor.

Iron-Bearing Plants.

Experiments have been under way to increase the quantity of iron carried in certain plants, with a view to the effect on the human system, when those plants are used as food. Artificially prepared foods containing iron do not always produce the desired effect, because the iron is not completely assimilated. This difficulty, it is thought, may be avoided by causing plants to take up an increased quantity of iron during their natural growth. By adding hydrate of iron to the soil in which it was growing, the experimenters have, it is reported, succeeded in producing spinach containing a percentage of iron seven times as great as that found in ordinary spinach. It is believed that the process will prove successful with other ferruginous plants.

Astronomers' Difficulties.

The astronomer peering through his telescope has to look through 50 turbulent miles of the earth's atmosphere. Even under the best conditions the rays of light which enter his telescope have been more or less deviated in their courses by refraction in passing from one layer of air to another, and in consequence the diffraction pattern of disk and rings, which can be so clearly and beautifully shown in the laboratory, oscillates, trembles and is more or less confused and distorted. Under more ordinary and worse conditions of "seeing" the image is more disturbed and dances about, coming only occasionally to rest, and it is during these favorable intervals alone that close pairs of stars can be seen double.

Sensitive Soul.

Timothy Carlson was a very sensitive man. More than once at a harsh word he had forsaken profitable work and gone home for sympathy to his wife. One morning Tim started out to help Harley Boggs, who had bought a new stump-pulling machine and was preparing to clear a field. Toward noon Timothy came back. Mrs. Carlson sighed and waited sympathetically for the explanation. "I jest couldn't stand it," said Timothy, rubbing his jaw. "When I see that stump puller twist them roots out it reminded me so of the times I went to the dentist to get back teeth extracted. The first thing I knew I was limp as a rag, and I jest ached all over and had to quit."

Worth Weight in Gold.

Of Shakespeare as originally printed there are not enough volumes to make a fair-sized armful. There are in existence two copies of "Hamlet," one lacking the title page, in the British museum, and the other lacking the leaf, in the United States. Of "Venus and Adonis," there are 13 known copies of the first eight editions, while of "Titus Andronicus" there is but a single copy. These "super-rarities" are called "quarto volumes" and command tremendous prices. The "folio" editions, which came later, are very rare, too, though not as rare as the quartos.—Winnipeg Tribune.

The "Ads" of Old.

Advertising is not a new art by any means. Advertisements of a kind appealing our modern ideas were in vogue in ancient Egypt, Greece and Rome. These, however, were mostly descriptions of runaway slaves, offers of reward for lost property, and so on. The people of Pompeii went much further. On the excavated walls of the buried city have been found announcements of gladiatorial shows, with rough pictures of favorite gladiators, etc., that must be taken as an illustrations of the modern picture poster.

Varying Views of Marriage.

The definition of marriage has particularly appealed to humorists. Petit-Senn has summed it up thus: "Marriage is a port in the storm, but more often a storm in the port"; while Edmond About uses another and more violent metaphor. Says this gentleman: "Marriage is in life like a duel in the midst of battle." Beaumarchais, on the other hand, is milder, but equally as cynical. He remarks that "of all serious things marriage is the most ludicrous." Balzac, who really never married, but who had much to say on the subject, puts it in this terse manner: "Marriage is a fight to the death." La Rochefoucauld, the greatest of the French epigrammatists, compromises with the extremists and remarks: "There are good marriages, but there are no delicious ones." How different is this esthetic viewpoint to the petulant observation of Sulpice Guillaume Gavarni, who says: "When a man says he has a wife, it means that a wife has him."

Potency of Sunny Souls.

We all know what a draught of refreshment it is when a sunny person comes into our company. A cheerful member redeems the meeting, a cheerful daughter is a godsend to the family, a cheerful workman lights up the shop, and even a cheerful face among the passengers of a railway coach or waiting room makes a distinct contribution to the well-being of all the crowd. Why not be one of these sunshine spreaders? Why not have every group glad to welcome you, every party brighten when you appear, every one in the room sit up and look relieved when you enter? Make your own sunshine and carry it with you, and you get what every creature wants—appreciation and affection. Perhaps it is because you are unlit that you are unloved.—Dr. Frank Crane in Leslie's.

Sounds That Bounce.

Like light, sound is formed by a vibration or a moving of the atmosphere. These sound waves travel through the air precisely as water waves travel through the sea, or as ripples are formed when one casts a pebble into a pond. Ripples of water are thrown back when they reach the edge of the pond, but owing to the loss of momentum the return wave is usually less noticeable than the original one. The air, however, being more resilient than water, bounces back when one of the sound waves strikes an obstruction, and eventually returns to its original source—the force of the return being largely dependent upon the nature of the obstruction and the atmospheric conditions prevailing at the time. It is this return of the sound waves that we call an echo.

Eve of First of May.

The eve of the first of May is known in German legend as Walpurgis night, the Detroit News recalls. Then witches and other workers of evil hold high revel and offer sacrifices to the devil as their lord and master. The scene of their festival in Germany is the Brocken, a famous peak in the Harz mountains, 3,745 feet high. This annual festival was, in the popular belief, conceded to them in recompense for the loss they sustained when by St. Walpurga the Saxons were persuaded to renounce paganism with its rites for Christianity. St. Walpurga was an English nun, who, in the middle of the Eighth century, went as a missionary to Germany. She was successful and was held in high honor by those she converted

Homes of the Middle Ages.

The two most essential improvements in architecture during this period, one of which had been missed by the sagacity of Greece and Rome, were chimneys and glass windows. Nothing apparently can be more simple than the former; yet the wisdom of ancient times had been content to let the smoke escape by an aperture in the center of the roof; and a discovery, of which Vitruvius had not a glimpse, was made, perhaps in this country, by some forgotten semi-barbarian. About the middle of the Fourteenth century the use of chimneys is distinctly mentioned in England and in Italy; but they are found in several of our castles which bear a much older date.

Dictators Out of Date.

If you're tempted to be a dictator, stand off somewhere and get a good square look at yourself. You might stand in the shadows on the corner, and let the fellows tell each other their opinion of you. It may not be exactly to your liking, but it may help you see what your rating is. Few people have enough of the all-wisdom to regulate the world. The best thing is for you to put your personal affairs in such shape that they will command the admiration of the community. Then folks will ask your advice and you can dictate so long as the advice you give is regarded by the other fellow as genuine service to him, but no longer.—Grit.

Ancient Crown Preserved.

The old crown of the Lombards is still preserved in the Church of St. John the Baptist at Monza. It is made of six pieces and adorned with 22 jewels, 26 golden roses and 24 emeralds. It was brought from Palestine by the Empress Helena, and given by Pope Gregory I to the Lombard princess Theodelinda. The crown was used in crowning the Lombard kings and the German emperors as kings of Italy. Napoleon used it at Milan in 1805, and the Emperor Ferdinand I in 1838. It was carried off by the Austrians in 1859 [illegible] to Vienna in 1866

WAGE REDUCTION FOR EXPRESS COMPANY MEN

Pittsburg employes of the American Railway Express company were notified on Thursday that their wages will be reduced June 11, and that their hours and working conditions will be revised July 1. This is consistent with the announced intention of the company to reduce wages and change the hours and working conditions of its 80,000 employes throughout America. The company is reported to be arranging a canference with representatives of its employes in the hope of arriving at a satisfactory agreement.

FINE TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON

Napoleon's Eulogy of the World's Greatest Man Regarded as Worthy of Eternal Preservation.

Approach of the hundredth anniversary of the death of Napoleon Bonaparte recalls the order of the day which he issued in his capacity as first consul, to the French army on the occasion of the death of the first president of the United States. The document is as follows:

"Soldiers! Washington is dead! This great man fought against tyranny. He consolidated the liberty of his native land. His memory will always be cherished by the French people, as well as by all free men of the two worlds, but more especially by the soldiers of France, who, like himself and the soldiers of America in times past, are fighting for equality and liberty. In recognition thereof, the first consul orders that for ten days all the standards and flags of the troops of the republic shall be draped with crape. (Signed) Bonaparte."

Not content with this, Bonaparte insisted that an official eulogy of the liberator of America should be pronounced, in the name of the republic, in the Temple of Mars, the name then given to the chapel of the Palace of the Invalides. The task was confided to Marechlin.de Fontane, the poet, who was given six days to prepare it. De Fontane accomplished his task to the satisfaction of Bonaparte, and it is generally agreed that his eulogy of Washington ranks among his very finest works.

HERO OF THREE COUNTRIES

South American Republics United in Their Desire to Do Honor to Memory of Bolivar.

The unveiling of a statue to Simon Bolivar, known as the George Washington of South America, took place in New York April 19.

There are statues of Bolivar in Caracas, Bogota, Lima and elsewhere. He was South America's superman on horseback. He drove the Spanish out. He became "Jefe Supremo" of the northern half of the continent. ("Hey-fay Sooprayma-w," please, signifying "Supreme Chief.") He fought 400 battles and escaped five attempted assassinations.

Bolivar has been described as "mercurial, impractical, visionary, recklessly daring, vainglorious, sympathetic, cunning, sensitive, intense, ambitious, with no sense of proportion, cruel and kind in the same breath, giving vent to the highest sentiments of frenzied patriotism, and practicing the most absolute despotism." History credits him with having spent 90 per cent of his large fortune for his country. Venezuela, and with having made no private use of public funds, although long in control of the revenues of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia. He failed in an attempt to unite all those countries under one flag, lost his power and popularity and died in exile.

Would Teach Youth to Think.

To teach people to think, Dr. C. A. Mercier of Bournemouth left $100,000 to be used to found a chair of national logic and scientific method at one of the universities. Among the conditions imposed are clauses directing that: Students are not to be taught what Aristotle or anyone else thought about reasoning, but to think and reason clearly for themselves. The professor is not to be chosen for his knowledge of the work or opinions of other logicians, but for his capacity to think and to reason and to teach. In selecting the professor preference is to be given to the candidate who does not know either Greek or German and, in any case, when appointed, such professor is not to devote more than one-twelfth of his teaching time in teaching the logic of Aristotle and the schools, nor more than one-twenty-fourth in teaching the logic of Hegel or other Germans.—Montreal Family Herald.

James Norman Hall has stirred up a veritable tumult in South Boston. In an article in Harper's Magazine he tells of meeting on a South Sea island an Irishman named Riley. Originally a native of Boston the son of an Irish immigrant, Riley is now the king of a South Sea island, with untold riches, a beautiful Tahitian queen, and hundreds of loyal subjects, all according to the best traditions of romance.

But who is he? Sou' Boston is largely populated by Rileys, and Mr. Hall does not specify to which branch of the family his hero belongs. Since the publication of the article there are but few of his name who do not claim kinship with the South Sea monarch who, since, as everybody knows, all the Rileys are descended from the ancient king of Ireland, is but enjoying his natural right in ruling from a royal throne—or hammock.

Oil Shells to the Rescue.

Oil thrown on the waves will calm them. Hence it has been suggested that oil shells be fired from life-line guns in the coast guard stations, to calm the waters around stranded ships.

If the oil shells are hurled well to the windward of a ship, and are made to explode on contact with the water, the oil will soon drift around the ship and make it possible for a lifeboat to be launched in safety.

An ideal oil shell would be one that would carry a gallon of oil.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Cord of Death.

An extraordinary method is employed for hanging criminals in the San Quentin penitentiary, California. No photographs have ever been taken of the death chamber, but this is what takes place. Three guards hide behind a screen near the gallows. They are employed to cut the cord which releases the trap door for the execution. In order that none of the men will know who cut the fatal strand, three cords are stretched across a table. All of these are cut at the same time, so that there is no way of knowing which one actually released the trap.

New Material for Silk.

Discovery has been made of a process by which the muscular tissue of horses and cattle can be converted into silk—a use being thus found for condemned cows and horses killed because of accident or old age. The flesh is softened by saturating it in a liquid, which separates the muscle fibers by dissolving the substance that holds them together. Then it is soaked in another liquid, which strengthens the fibers and gives them a silky character. Silk thus obtained can be rubberized and made waterproof by soaking it for some hours in a bath of rubber.

Labor on the Farm.

"Mechanical improvements have done a lot of labor saving for us agriculturists," observed Si Sinkin. "That have that," agreed Farmer Corntassel. "There's no end to the work and worry we've been spared since they invented self-starters for our automobiles."

A Friendly Office.

"You admit, then, that you voted a man who had been dead for ten years?" "Yes," said the practical politician, "but he was an old friend of mine and I knew [illegible] carrying [illegible] ham [illegible]"

Unlucky Doctor.

The Chinese have a strong sense of humor. This joke, told by a writer in the "Open Court," will bring a smile to almost any face: There was a doctor who understood so little of his profession that every now and then he killed one of his patients. He had a son and a daughter. One day he had sent the son of a family to the other world, and since the family was much dissatisfied he gave them his own son in compensation. Subsequently he had the misfortune to dispatch the daughter of another couple and was obliged to give them his own daughter to make good the loss. He was now alone with his wife. They were feeling lonely and miserable one evening, when again some one knocked at the door and asked for the doctor. He went out himself and inquired of the man who it was that needed him. The man said that it was his wife.

The poor doctor went back into his room and, shedding tears, said to his wife: "I see it coming. There must be somebody who has cast an eye on you."

Louis Philippe and Wife.

Louis Philippe (1773-1850) was the eldest son of Duke Louis of Orleans. He supported the French revolution, but was suspected of aiming at the crown and was compelled to leave France in 1793. He did not return until after the fall of Napoleon in 1815, having spent the intervening time in Austria, America and Great Britain. After the revolution of 1830 and the abdication of Charles X, he was elected "king of the French by the grace of God and the will of the people." He held this office until 1848, when another revolution occurred, and he retired to England, where he and his wife—arriving as "Mr. and Mrs. Smith"—settled in Claremont, placed at their disposal by Queen Victoria, under the incognito of Count and Countess of Neuilly. Louis Philippe died at Claremont August 26, 1850.

This Old Earth.

Abbe Theodore Moreaux director of the observatory of Bourges, in an article in La Revue de Ciel, declares the world to be five hundred million years old, instead of fifty million, the opinion of other astronomers. Abbe Moreaux also thinks that man existed for tens of thousands of years instead of six thousand based on figures in the Bible. He says the belief of German scientists that human beings have existed for four hundred thousand years has no basis in fact. The Bible's six thousand years are an invention of the translators and copyists. Life, Abbe Moreaux says, has existed on the earth for at least two hundred and forty to two hundred and sixty million years, although it has not been human life. He says the moon was not once part of the earth, but was a sun that once aided in warming the earth.

Music and Morals.

Take the art of music. Great music, even merely good music which has melody and harmony in it, flows around us like a stream of pure, clear water, or, like the billows of a great sea, it refreshes and it strengthens; but sensual music, lascivious music, mean music, if it can be called music at all, irritates, demoralizes and vulgarizes those who listen to it. Jazz, for example, I think, was invented by imps for the torment of imbeciles. True, it does not contain any distinct immoral teaching, because music is not a didactic art, but jazz does contain a real immoral influence, because it confuses, bewilders, benumbs and befuddles the mind through the ears. It is, in effect, the dope or knockout drop [illegible] art [illegible]—Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

JUST ONE OF TWO THINGS

"Bill" Would Make Reputation, Or There Would Be a Bad Time for Employer.

Bill Blythe was really a gardener. But he was a generally all round useful man, who had never been known to say "No" when he had been asked if he could do a thing.

One day the chauffeur, who usually drove the motorcar in which Bill's employer journeyed, was taken ill.

Bill's employer had very important business engagements for that day, and it was essential that he should be driven in the car unless he was to miss some of them.

So Bill was sent for and asked if he would undertake to drive the car.

Bill had never driven a car before, but he had helped the chauffeur to wash the machine.

That was good enough for Bill. He said:

"Yes."

Remembering the little theory talks he had had with the chauffeur, Bill managed to get the car round to the front door, and his employer got in.

With some maneuvering the car was driven out onto the main road, and then, gritting his teeth, Bill threw the clutch into top gear, and muttered:

"Now to make a reputation or kill the boss."

Iron Ore in Philippines.

The finest unworked iron fields in the world have been discovered in the Philippines, according to a report from government experts recently received by the United States bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The quantities of ore adjacent to good harbors, they state, will be sufficient to assure the future of iron and steel production in the United States for generations.

Already land believed to contain more than 500,000,000 tons has been surveyed. Deposits on the island of Mindanao are believed to be without a rival. They contain 275,000,000 tons close to good harbors and 130,000,000 tons within easy transportation distance of Dajkin bay, perhaps the best natural harbor on the islands. Only crude iron work in primitive smelters is being carried on at present.—From the Argonaut.

Darwin's Stand on Income Tax.

The mayor of Darwin, Australia, has become noted by his refusal for two years to pay federal income tax on the ground that Darwin had no representation in the federal parliament. In spite of official warnings, Mayor Toupein has adhered to his determination —No Taxation Without Representation. For a time, while it was understood that the northern territory would have representation in the federal senate, no steps were taken to coerce the Toupeinites of Darwin, but when it became known that the mayor was leaving Darwin official action was promised. Praise and presentations, however, not penalties, have marked the departure of the mayor. Whether the tax collector will catch him when he sets foot in southern Australia is a point which will be speedily settled.—Christian Science Monitor.

Sackfired.

When the clock struck "12" the other night father came to the head of the stairway and in a rather loud tone of voice said:

"Young man, is your 'self-starter' out of order tonight?!"

"It doesn't matter," retorted the young man, "as long as there's a crank in the house."

LOCK FOUR MAN ON GOVERNMENT STEAMER

Earl Jones, formerly an engineer at Lock 4, and also employed for some time on the steamer Alicia, has succeeded James W. Handley as engineer on the United States lighthouse tender Golden Rod, which takes care of the lights on the Ohio and Monongahela rivers between Cairo, Ill., and Fairmont, W. Va. Mr. Handley, who has retired, is 82 years of age, and for the last 34 years was chief engineer on the steamer Golden Rod. Altogether he had been identified for the past 66 years with marine affairs, serving for many years on some of the larger passenger packets on the Mississippi as engineer

SCENE OF MAJESTIC BEAUTY

Table Mountain, for Many Reasons, Is Superior to Any of the Earth's Great Peaks.

I have seen many flat-topped kopjes in Africa. I have seen the bare and golden Atlas range drop away into the golden sands of Mogador, but I have never seen anything resembling its mighty mass which is the dominant, the royal fact of the Cape Peninsula. . . . It is by virtue of its mass and the colossal buttressed cliffs which form its walls that Table mountain is majestic, as also by the abruptness of its rise from the visible sea-level. The height of inland mountains is a matter of faith rather than sight; but this mountain, like Etna and the Peak of Teneriffe and others whose roots are in the sea, announces its stature at once to the eye. It rises more immediately from the sea than either of these, yet not so immediately as it appears to do when seen from the bay. It throws out toward the ocean low spurs of mingled rock and green banks. In spring these grassy banks are all set with flowers. Among them is a pretty white flower, about the size of a narcissus, though different in shape, of which I have seen a bouquet in England, many weeks after it had been gathered at the Cape, standing in a vase without water and still quite fresh. . . . —Margaret L. Woods.

NEED FOR BALANCE WHEEL

Courage Is, of Course, a Magnificent Thing, But Should Be Regulated by Prudence.

Courage is an indispensable quality in our success; but if it is not balanced and regulated by prudence it will run away with us and lead us into all sorts of foolhardy things. Boldness is a great quality when it is held in check by proper cautiousness and guided by good judgment.

I know a man whose courage is very much over-developed and his faculty of caution is very deficient. He does not know what fear means, and he plunges into all sorts of foolish operations which do not turn out well, and he is always trying to get out of things which he had gone into hastily. If his prudence had been equally developed with his courage, with his boldness, he would have made a very strong man.

Futile endeavors, half-hearted efforts never accomplish anything. It takes the fire of determination, energy, push, and good judgment to accomplish that which counts. It is the well-balanced enthusiastic man with fire in his blood, and ginger in his brain, who makes things move and achieves the seemingly impossible.—Denver Catholic Register.

A story of Alexander the Great and a kiss forms one of the most thrilling bits of history. An enemy of the king's invented a novel plot to cause Alexander's death. He discovered a beautiful young girl, who, like Rappacini's daughter in Hawthorne's story, had been brought up on deadly poison, and every one who came near her was killed by her deadly atmosphere. She was sent to the king's palace with instructions to do what would be called "vamping" today. Alexander saw and admired her extravagantly, but the shrewd Aristotle suspected treachery. Before he allowed the girl to approach the throne he sent for a criminal who had been sentenced to death, and instructed him to kiss the girl in the presence of the king. He fell dead on the ground, like one struck by lightning.

The same story appears in folklore of India, and the early Christian monks made great use of it in their sermons, personifying the Christian as Alexander, conscience as Aristotle, sin as the venomous girl, and the weak sinner as the criminal who was punished.

Disagree Over Famous Vine.

On Roanoke island, off the North Carolina coast, stands an ancient Scuppernong vine. It is near the grave of Virginia Dare and the site of the "Lost Colony." Nobody knows the age of that vine, but many nearby vines, which seem more youthful by comparison, actually are known to be more than one hundred years old.

A regional contraction to American mythology credits Sir Walter Raleigh with having planted the vine where it now stands, and further claims are that it is the original Scuppernong. Unimaginative investigators, however, say that the original Scuppernong grew wild in Tyrrell county, North Carolina, along the Scuppernong river, well before 1709, and that from this county the species found its way to Roanoke island.

Shoe-Throwing Old Custom.

Throwing old shoes was not always confined to weddings though the custom nowadays has come to be associated entirely with the going away of bridal couples. Authorities differ as to the origin of the practice and its exact significance; it seems, however, as if it had to do with the transfer of property—women being regarded as such among the nations in which the custom began.

It was in the sense of confirming a sale or exchange that the Jews understood the removal and giving of a shoe or sandal. When the kinsman of Boaz consented to waive his claim upon the parcel of land which Naomi would sell he "drew off his shoe," for "this is the custom of Israel."

RITES OF MOUND BUILDERS

How "Bundle Burials" and "Burials in the Flesh" Were Conducted by Ancient Race.

After an Indian mound has been cleared and surveyed it is stripped of the surface sod and excavated by a series of trenches. One mound, says the Southern Workman, contained no less than 45 "bundle burials," with two "burials in the flesh" above of later date. These "bundle" burials were disarticulated skeletons that had been taken down from trees and made into bundles. In each "bundle," as a rule, were the bones of from two to four individuals. They were placed end to end, lengthways, north to south, and formed a layer some ten feet long and five feet wide. They were placed on a carefully prepared bed of alternate layers of golden and bright-red sands, evidently of ceremonial import, and surrounded by several stone altars, on these appropriate sacrifices were made to the dead; there were signs of fire all about. Some half-burned human bones in well-preserved oak charcoal were found near the top, indicating that some poor captive had been burned at the stake to minister to the souls of the dead on their journey to the happy hunting grounds. In the top strata were found two skeletons, both of them strongly fixed, with the knees drawn up to the chin. They were evidently of considerable age, but of later origin than the "bundle" burials. In fact, all the bones in this group of mounds showed extreme signs of decomposition. It was necessary to "paint" them all with a transfusing fluid the moment they were exposed to the air. These two skeletons were perhaps the remains of people who had died during the construction of the mounds and were given burial in the top of them.

REALM OF DEATH ON EARTH

Country in the Vicinity of Mount Vesuvius Graphically Portrayed by Gifted Frenchwoman.

The country at the foot of Vesuvius is the most fertile and best cultivated of the kingdom most favored by heaven in all Europe. The celebrated Lacryma Christi vine flourishes beside land totally devastated by lava, as if nature here made a last effort and resolved to perish in her richest array.

As you ascend you turn to gaze on Naples and on the fair land about it—the sea sparkles in the sun as if strewn with jewels; but all the splendors of creation are extinguished by degrees, as you enter the region of ashes and smoke, that announce your approach to the volcano.

The iron waves of other years have traced large black furrows in the soil. At a certain height birds are no longer seen; further on plants become very scarce; then even insects find no nourishment. At last all life disappears; you enter the realm of death, and the slain earth's dust slips beneath your unassured feet.—Madame De Staël.

Armenia First Christian Nation.

The Armenians are an Aryan race and probably emigrated from Europe into Asia Minor centuries before the Christian era. Their language belongs to the Indo-European group of languages. Their king was converted to Christianity as early as 301 A. D., and Armenia then became the first Christian nation of the world. The Armenian civilization has been established for centuries. The position of the country on the highway between Asia and Europe has subjected it to invasion and subjugation at various periods by the Assyrians, Medes, Greeks, Romans, Persians and Turks. From the Fourteenth century to the late war, the greatest part of Armenia was under Turkish rule. Their enmity to the Turks rises from their struggles as a nation to be free, which have frequently been accompanied by massacres of Armenians. America's interest arises from sympathy with an oppressed race that has for so long upheld Christian civilization in the Near East.

There is in Cuba a curious grass, Jenebrus echinatus, which bristles with tiny sharp-pointed spikelets upon which multitudes of insects are impaled, by night as well as by day. The wings of the victims are pierced and entangled by the set of spikes, so that most of them are unable to get away, and thus perish miserably.

Even a large, ferocious stapling beetle, which is so strong and active that it can with difficulty be held in the hand, falls a victim to these vegetable bayonets. It has been observed, however, that two species of insects, a large bug, Oebalus, and an earwig, readily free themselves from the spikes. Minute insects are not caught. The grass does not appear to derive any nourishment from its prey. It is found elsewhere in the West Indies and in southern Florida.

City Has Endowed Flagstaff.

There is an endowed staff in the United States, that on the common at Lawrence, Mass. At the time of the Lawrence strike some years ago, when many indignities were shown to the American flag, there was held a flag parade of 40,000 persons, each carrying a flag as a protest. A public-spirited citizen, Joseph Shattuck, offered to erect a flagstaff and to set aside funds, the interest on which would buy flags for the staff. The city of Lawrence accepted the offer, and today on its common is one of the finest flagstaffs in the world.

IT'S JUST CHATEAU THIERRY

World-Famous Village Apparently Is Unaware of Its Immense Historic Importance.

Chateau Thierry has patched its roofs, plastered its chimneys, painted its shutters and decided to forget the war. At first every villager dreamed of making his fortune as a tourist guide. They are all back now at their old trades. It is only the good housewife who still pays attention to tourists, and then only to think black thoughts of the dust raised by the rubber neck cars that plunge without a stop through the village streets.

Over the bridge, our famous bridge, that crosses the Marne come the jolting market carts filled with beets and cabbages grown in the farm lands at the foot of Belleau Wood. There is a good deal of grumbling about the temporary wood structure that now spans the Marne, and the peasants tell you that they cannot imagine why the soldiers did not build it wide enough to let two carts pass each other.

In the Cafe des Mariniers they talk no more of the war. Instead one hears only the idle gossip that the river men have picked up. Chateau Thierry is no place for the sentimentalist who has imagined that this town of towns would live forever in awe of its memories.

A walk through the streets reveals few marks of either the German or the American occupation. In a field on the outskirts stands the skeleton of a "tin lizzie" that once did ambulance service. On the door jambs of several houses one can still read the billeting officer's stencils telling how many soldiers each house would accommodate. In one instance the owner has purposely left unpainted a square around these sacred numbers as a delicate tribute to his departed guests.—George F. Kearney in the American Legion Weekly.

EPH HAD NOTHING TO SAY

Absent-Minded Man Didn't Wait to Make Explanation of Somewhat Laughable Situation.

Old Ephram Davis had the reputation of being the most absent-minded man in Chenango county. One day he went to S—— on various matters of business. At the tailor's he bought a new suit, which he donned, asking that his old one be wrapped up. He then went to the railroad office and purchased bonds of considerable value and placed them in the breast pocket of his new suit. After doing several other errands he drove leisurely home.

Some time afterward he went to get the bonds from the pocket of his old suit. Naturally, he did not find them there. Greatly perturbed he put on his new suit and set off for S——. There he went immediately to the bank.

"I bought some bonds here the other day," he began in his drawling voice, "and I put them right in this here pocket." His hand went up to his coat. At a sudden rustling that ensued an expression ludicrous in its mixture of shamefacedness and relief came into the wrinkled countenance. "And by gosh, here they be!"

Without another word he turned on his heel and walked out, leaving the bank employees convulsed with laughter.—Youth's Companion.

Her Business.

Judge T. J. Moll of Superior court, room 5, sometimes tells a story which runs like this:

In one of the courts in southern Indiana a woman was on trial for the unlawful practice of sorcery. She was being questioned by the prosecution, but her occupation made her sufficiently adept in repartee to offset any incriminating evidence which she might have thrown on herself by a committal answer. Finally the judge became irate and shot this question to her point blank:

"Are you or are you not a sorceress?" And just as quickly came back the answer:

"Your honor, that's my business."

The judge was on the point of sentencing her for contempt of court when he realized that she had given a perfectly civil answer.—Indianapolis News.

Britain's Great Sailor.

An admiral's sword, which had been surrendered to Nelson by the Spanish admiral on board the San Josef after the battle of St. Vincent, has just been sold for about $25. The sword was worth much more to Nelson, and to Great Britain. For this victory of 1797 is of peculiar significance in Britain's naval history, in that it first revealed the full capacity of Nelson—already well known in the navy—to all his countrymen, and led to his appointment as rear admiral. In this action, when the Spaniards seemed likely to escape, Nelson, without waiting for orders, threw his ship, the Captain, across their bows, a movement which led to their complete defeat. Nelson received the swords of the Spanish officers on the deck of the San Josef and became at once a popular figure.

New Idea in Jelly-Making.

In the jelly making process patented by M. O. Johnson, fruit juice is concentrated by freezing out a portion of its water, and is then heated to a temperature high enough to coagulate suspended matter, though not high enough to impair the flavor. After separation of coagulated matter, the juice is sterilized by heating to a temperature below that employed for coagulation, then jellified after sugar has been added. Sugar added before coagulation may give better clarification.

Time to Go.

"She said 'No'?"

"Yes," said the dejected suitor.

"Cheer up. A woman's 'No' sometimes means 'Yes.'"

"Not in this case. The door bell rang and she produced the other man."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

NEW GUINEA HEAD-HUNTERS

Periodical Forays Were Until Comparatively Recently a Regular Thing in the Island.

Until six years ago head-hunting was in full swing along the coast of New Guinea, writes Rev. L. Cappers in Catholic Missions, and describes one of these expeditions by the tribe of the Marienberg or Jos Kayas. The preacher, he says, has been considerably checked by military expeditions. Nevertheless head-hunting is quite frequent in the interior. On the appointed day a band of about fifteen would return to the point of embarkation. At the approach of their boat the [illegible] and the entire party silently entered the forest, taking care not to give the alarm. Extreme care was needed over the designated spot must soon be reached. On the day before the attack the hunters kept hidden in the bush, and during the night they advanced far enough to launch the attack early before dawn. Occasionally, the hunters were badly received, but most of the time the intended victims were roused from their sleep by the sudden war-cry of the whole attacking party, and had no time to defend themselves. Victims were felled by the dozen, many of them pierced through by the sharp-pointed arrows.

The victors yelled their war-cry and repaired to their native haunts, where days and nights of feasting awaited them with song and dance, around the gruesome trophy.

GOT JOHN BURROUGHS' 'GOAT'

Great Naturalist Admitted That Iron Wall of Treasury Vault Had Bad Effect on Him.

It was while sitting in front of the [illegible] wall of the treasury vault at Washington that John Burroughs, guardian of the $50,000,000 the vault contained, wrote his first book, "Wake Robin." In that book it has been thought that he got closer to nature than in any of the others. "Perhaps I did," he said of it. "I know I was closer to it in longing. That iron wall reacted on me."

Mr. Burroughs realized, of course, the necessity of money to provide the comforts of existence, and his books brought him a handsome return. And this recalls an incident of a fox hunt in which he and his brother, Eben, joined about a dozen years ago. Eben Burroughs lived at Hobart, in the Catskills, and on this particular hunt the honors went to Eben, who shot the fox. At that time fox skins were worth about $5, and the successful brother relished telling of his success. Once when boasting of it to a party of friends he was halted by this from Brother John: "You have bragged about that fox hunt long enough. You shot the fox and sold the skin for $5. I wrote a little account of the hunt and sold it to a magazine for $75. So there you are."

SPECIAL OFFICER TO ENFORCE QUARANTINE

Harry Morrison of Donora, has been appointed by the state authorities to carry out the provisions of the recent quarantine on dogs to be maintained in this district. It is reported that little or no attention is being paid to the state order, but beginning at once its requirements will be enforced, and all canines caught running at large will be killed and its owner prosecuted.

The state ordered this precautionary measure, owing to the fact that several persons have been bitten or attacked by dogs suffering with rabies, and it is the duty of Mr. Morrison to see that the provision of the order are strictly complied with.

LECTURES PROVED TO BE VERY INTERESTING

The lectures given in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Lock Four, during the past week proved to be very interesting. The illustrations exhibited by the speaker, Elder C. E. Miller, were made from photographs taken by the lecturer in the Society Islands, Australia and the Hawaiian Islands. The lecture on last Sunday evening was on the Carlisle Indian school and showed just what the government is doing to educate the Indians. Incidentally the speaker spoke of the misunderstanding concerning this church, asserting there was no connection between it and the Utah Mormon church. The people of the community showed their appreciation by filling the building to capacity each evening. Similar lectures are to be given in the future.

Mr. Merchant: Let the people of Charleroi and vicinity know what you have to sell, and the advantages of dealing with you. Then there will be no need of knocking the mail order houses.

The Ladies Aid of the Lutheran church will hold a bake sale in Doerzlacher Store Saturday May 7. 282t2

The raven is a bird among birds, self-reliant and formidable. Naturalists, says a writer in the New York Sun, call him the most wary, the most amusing, the cleverest of birds. He is also described as grave, dignified and sedate. The bill of the raven is a formidable weapon, strong, stout, sharp at the edges and curved toward the tip. It is his sole weapon of offense, but it answers the purpose of two or three. Like the dirk of a soldier or a plainsman, it is available as a digger or as a carving knife; also it can also be used as a pair of pinchers. With one blow it can kill a rat, and the raven can easily drive it through the spines of a hedgehog. If it is true that the raven will never attack a man, probably it is not so much from lack of courage as from the bird's keen intellectual perception of what is unwise.

"Kosher" Meat.

According to Jewish law, the word "kosher" means "ceremoniously clean." All animals or fowls to be "koshered" are killed by a rabbi or his deputy. The chief difference between Jewish and Gentile slaughtering methods being that the Hebrew cuts the throat without first stunning the animal by a blow on the head, as is usually done in other than kosher killing. This seems to be based on the theory that the conscious animal bleeds more thoroughly than one that has been stunned, and, according to Jewish belief, no blood must remain in the meat when it is consumed. Partly in an effort to make this absence of blood doubly sure, the Jewish housewife usually salts her meat heavily and allows it to stand in the salt at least an hour. The salt is then washed off and the meat prepared for eating.

The Love of Color.

Vegetable dyes were used by the aborigines of all parts of America to ornamenting their utensils, stain their baskets and fabrics. Many of the textiles found in the prehistoric graves of Peru are remarkable for their beautiful and permanent colors. Few of these, unfortunately, can be traced to the plants from which they were derived. The introduction of foreign dyes has been disastrous. Their cheapness and the facility with which they can be transported has caused them to be widely adopted in place of native dyes, the preparation of which is fast becoming obsolete. The ancient Mexicans made use of a number of beautiful pigments, mostly vegetable, for the picture-writing of their celebrated codices. Nearly all of their colors can be identified.

CONTRIBUTION TO MONON. MEMORIAL

The county commissioners have made an appropriation of $2,098 towards the completion of the memorial monument being erected in Monongahela to the memory of the soldier boys of that vicinity who took part in the World War. This action of the county officials is in accordance with the Act of June 4, 1919 which authorizes an award to be made from the public funds in behalf of the construction of a memorial to veterans of the war with Austria and Germany.

The tablet, as erected, contains 700 names, together with a special mark to designate the 37 soldiers of the Monongahela district whose bodies repose in France. It is a very beautiful piece of work and will well commemorate the services of the gallant lads who offered their all that the peace of the world might be preserved.

The figure to surmount the tablet will be placed in a few days, and arrangements are now being made for the dedication of the monument on Memorial Day, at which time Hon. Henry W. Temple, from this district will be the principal speaker and an address will be made by Col. Churchill Mehard of Pittsburg.
